

HealthEC Update – Good News and Bad News

More Good News! - Our population health information technology platform has been successfully implemented in the majority of our participating practices. We – and you - can now view our quality performance measures. We are finding that many of our practices are as good as they say they are. In the weeks and months ahead, our staff will be working with you to use HealthEC for the benefit of your patients.

Reminder: As described in our Participation Agreements, HealthEC is a shared expense. The Pennsylvania Medical Society, through the PA Clinical Network, paid the server costs and project management fees from HealthEC, while the access and maintenance fees are charged to the clinics. Now that HealthEC is “live” in many of the clinics, you will begin to receive invoices from the PA Clinical Network so that we can, in turn, pay HealthEC for this additional service. Please contact us directly if there are any questions about this service.

True Performance Plus (TP+) ,Capital BlueCross Quality First Neighborhood – We have developed the modeling for these two 2021 contract possibilities. We will be reaching out to you with the details and next steps. We think these programs offer significant upsides, but we need your input.

Employees, Their Children, COVID and School Closures

Jackson Siegelbaum Gastroenterology has developed an answer to the public school closures. Rather than let their workers choose between employment and staying at home, they are hosting their employee’s children onsite with certified instructors, who can help with online learning. The business model, policies, procedures and other countless details can be shared with you. Their Executive team will help and consult on setup if desired. Email us for more information!

Medent News

Medent is an industry leading electronic health record used by a significant number of our participating clinics. They have agreed to apply significant discounts to their future connection fees for the HealthEC platform. We continue to work with other electronic health record companies to be reasonable stewards of your patients’ information.
